AMA Improving Health Outcomes: Cardiovascular disease and type 2 diabetes

The American Medical Association is committing its resources, expertise and reach to prevent heart disease, stroke and type 2 diabetes and to improve outcomes for those with these diseases. Physicians across all specialties and in all communities see patients with these conditions. The AMA is creating and strengthening clinical-community linkages to help physicians and patients improve outcomes. Visit ama-assn.org to learn more about this initiative and its role in the AMA's commitment to improving the health of the nation.

The AMA chose to focus on cardiovascular disease and type 2 diabetes because these conditions impact millions of patients and nearly all physicians, cause enormous suffering and death, and add significant costs to our economy. Cardiovascular disease accounts for one-third of all deaths in our nation and one-in-three adults could have diabetes by 2050 if current trends continue. The direct and indirect cost of cardiovascular disease and diabetes is more than $535 billion a year. With proper intervention, the effects of these conditions can be dramatically reduced, leading to a healthier nation and reducing health care spending. The AMA is in a unique position to reach physicians in all practice settings and specialties and bring them together with communities and public and private sector organizations to prevent—and to achieve measurable improvements in health outcomes for—cardiovascular disease and diabetes.

Where will you focus your efforts first?

The AMA will begin its work on improving health outcomes by first addressing key risk factors for cardiovascular disease and diabetes—namely high blood pressure and prediabetes. Despite the availability of therapies and prevention measures, a large proportion of the U.S. population—including those currently receiving clinical care—do not have their high blood pressure or prediabetes addressed adequately. Several health systems have succeeded in reducing these risk factors, but these examples have rarely been replicated. The AMA will collaborate with other organizations focused on addressing these risk factors to help develop new approaches to achieving better control of blood pressure and preventing progression of prediabetes to diabetes.

The AMA will help physicians connect their patients who are at risk of developing type 2 diabetes with evidence-based prevention programs that are aimed at improving diet and physical activity and achieving moderate weight loss. We will also focus on improving outcomes for the 30 million people with high blood pressure who are receiving medical care but do not have their blood pressure under control. We will share our findings so they can be implemented broadly.

How will the AMA collaborate with ongoing national initiatives to improve health outcomes for cardiovascular disease and diabetes and what are the AMA's short-term goals?

The AMA will work side by side with physicians and care teams, patients and families, communities and public health agencies to reduce the prevalence of cardiovascular disease and diabetes. We are collaborating with the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' Million Hearts® initiative and have adopted its goal of achieving healthy blood pressure for an additional 10 million Americans with high blood pressure by 2017. We will work with the Armstrong Institute for Patient Safety and Quality at Johns Hopkins University to improve care for patients by developing a model for better detection and management of high blood pressure and more effectively sharing the latest clinical practice guidelines.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's National Diabetes Prevention Program is focused on delaying or preventing the progression of prediabetes to diabetes through lifestyle interventions aimed at improving diet and physical activity and achieving moderate weight loss. Under an effort funded by the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Innovation, the AMA will collaborate with YMCA of the USA to help attain a joint target of 10,000 additional Medicare participants in the YMCA's Diabetes Prevention Program. The AMA will focus on increasing physician referrals of people with prediabetes to local YMCA program sites and enhancing communication between clinical practices and the YMCA program sites.

How will you report on progress toward achieving these goals?

The AMA is committed to sharing our progress toward achieving goals for improving cardiovascular and diabetes health. We will use the AMA website to share information, highlight efforts the AMA is supporting or directly engaged in, and to track progress in meeting performance and outcome goals. We will also convene experts to determine the best ways to provide useful information on improving cardiovascular and diabetes health to physicians and patients.

Where will the AMA focus its advocacy efforts for improving health outcomes?

The AMA will continue its long-standing advocacy efforts to ensure health, wellness and well-being for Americans of all backgrounds and in all communities. We will review the scientific literature and AMA policies to identify high-impact focus areas relevant to improving cardiovascular and diabetes health and reducing health disparities. The AMA recognizes that improving health outcomes will require advocacy at the federal as well as state level, and we will support the advocacy efforts of state medical societies with shared goals. Given the importance of this work, we will also coordinate our health outcomes advocacy efforts with national medical specialty societies and other organizations that are committed to improving cardiovascular and diabetes health.

Why move to devices and IV administration sets produced with non-DEHP materials?

A lower risk alternative

Patient safety is an important consideration. The reduction of DEHP from healthcare products reduces the risk of adverse effects among neonates and other high-risk patients.

A "green" standard

Efforts to minimize the release of DEHP into the environment are becoming increasingly common among healthcare facilities. Choosing non-DEHP products helps to support that endeavor.

An efficient solution

Choosing non-DEHP products provides the opportunity to standardize. Product selection and efficiency may be enhanced with a smaller, more manageable inventory.

Reduced risk, less harm to the environment and greater efficiencies may not be the only benefits of non-DEHP materials for YOUR organization. Have you thought about what other benefits might be generated by moving to non-DEHP devices and sets?

Although non-melanoma skin cancers usually occur in people who are older than 50, recent reports show more and more people under 40 developing the condition, which is the most common type of cancer in the US. The problem is especially severe among women, researchers from Rochester's Mayo Clinic say.

Source: American Cancer Society

Indoor tanning before the age of 35 has been associated with a significant increase in the risk of melanoma. Yet on an average day, more than one million Americans use indoor tanning salons. Research shows 70 percent of indoor tanners are female, primarily 16 to 29 years old, an age group that's particularly at risk for developing skin cancer.

Reimbursement for Oral Exam and Fluoride Varnish Treatment in the Physician Office

Early childhood caries (ECC) or tooth decay is the single most prevalent chronic disease among young children. In fact, it is 5 times more common than asthma. 18% of children between 2 and 4, and 52% of children between 6 and 8 have tooth decay. ¹One reason is that, by age 2, children have seen a Primary Care Physician an average of 7 times for well child visits, but few have had well child dental visits.

Medical Guidelines

The American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) recommends that pediatricians perform for all children an oral health risk assessment and establish a dental home by the age of 12 months. ²While AAP does not have a policy on fluoride varnish treatment, it notes that some child health professionals are administering fluoride varnish treatments. In addition, 35 states are reimbursing physicians for oral exams and fluoride varnish treatments through Medicaid.

Fluoride Varnish Treatment³

The procedure is relatively simple and takes a few minutes. Use 2 x 2 gauze to dry the child's teeth. Then apply the fluoride varnish to all tooth surfaces. Finally, provide post-treatment care instructions to parents. See manufacturers indications for use. For complete details, please see manufacturer's physician's directions.

Reimbursement for Oral Health Risk Assessment and Fluoride Varnish Treatment

Currently, Medicaid reimburses physicians for performing oral health assessment and/or fluoride varnish applications in approximately 35 states. Medicaid reimbursements for oral exams and/or fluoride varnish application range from $9 to $86.54.⁴ The procedure code for the fluoride varnish application is D-1203, D-1206, and D-0120; D-0145 for the oral exam.
